Enchanted Winter Party

Early one winter morning, Belle and the Beast came upon the enchanted objects cleaning up the kitchen. Belle wanted to thank them for all the hard work they did around the castle.

"Let's plan a surprise party," suggested Belle.

"That's a wonderful idea," replied the Beast.

Mrs. Potts, Cogsworth, and Lumiere saw the happy couple whispering. That gave Mrs. Potts an idea.

"Those two love to share secrets," she said. "We should show them that we can keep secrets, too, by planning a surprise tea party for them!"

"Excellent suggestion!" replied Lumiere. Cogsworth agreed to help, and the threesome scurried off to get started.

Belle and the Beast walked through the snow to the forest just outside the castle garden.

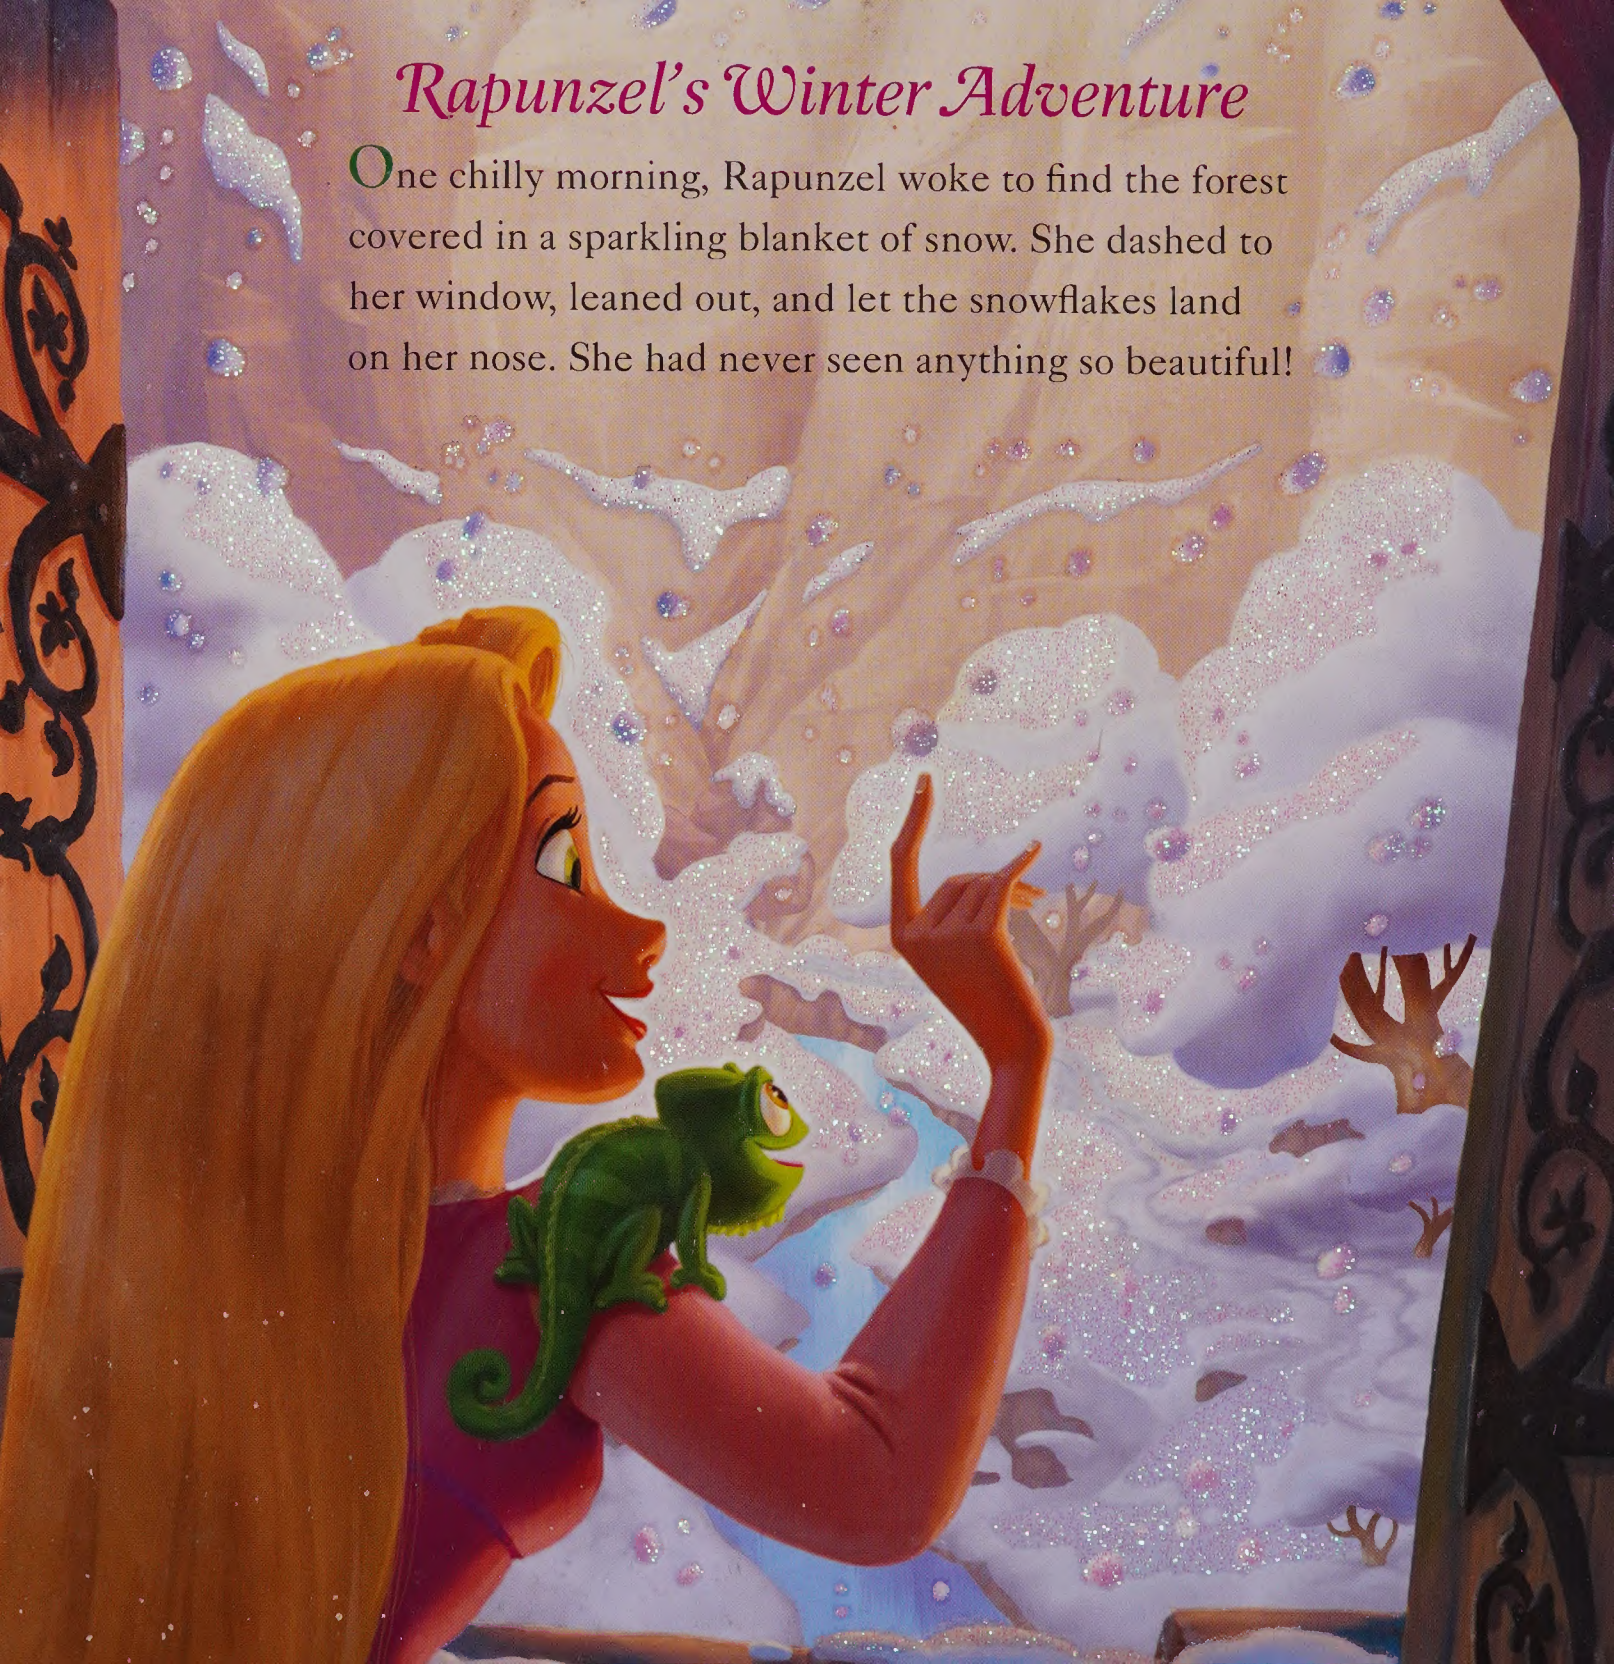
"We need decorations for the party," said Belle as she picked bunches of bright red holly berries. The Beast collected a handful of frosty pinecones.

Meanwhile, in the kitchen, Mrs. Potts was busy brewing tea for the couple's surprise party. Cogsworth and Lumiere helped by mixing up batter and baking some yummy holiday cakes. Everything was going just as planned!

Belle used the pinecones and berries to decorate the chandelier. The Beast wrapped little presents for all of their wonderful friends. Belle looked around and smiled—the room was finally ready for the party!

Just then, the enchanted objects brought in tea and cakes. "Surprise!" they shouted.

Everyone laughed as they enjoyed the snacks and decorations at the double surprise party. It was a wonderful way to spend a winter day!



Rapunzel's Winter Adventure

One chilly morning, Rapunzel woke to find the forest covered in a sparkling blanket of snow. She dashed to her window, leaned out, and let the snowflakes land on her nose. She had never seen anything so beautiful!

Pascal, Rapunzel's pet chameleon, wanted her to play in the snow.

"You know I can't go outside," she told him.

Since Rapunzel had to stay in the tower, Pascal did his best to bring the magic of winter inside to her. He found red berries for Rapunzel to string into garlands, which she used to decorate the house.

"This is fun!" she said.

When Pascal pointed to the frost on the windowsill, Rapunzel was inspired! She used her paints to add swirls of snowflakes to the tower walls.

After a long day of activities, Pascal and Rapunzel settled into their favorite spot. As they warmed up by the fire, Rapunzel knitted her little friend a cozy sweater.

"What a perfect way to end the day!" said Rapunzel.

Snowflakes in Agrabah

Jasmine and Aladdin had always dreamed of visiting a winter wonderland, and after a quick trip on the Magic Carpet, that dream had come true! Jasmine loved the beautiful snow, but poor Abu was confused—the little monkey had never seen snow before. Soon he would find out how much fun playing with the frosty stuff could be!

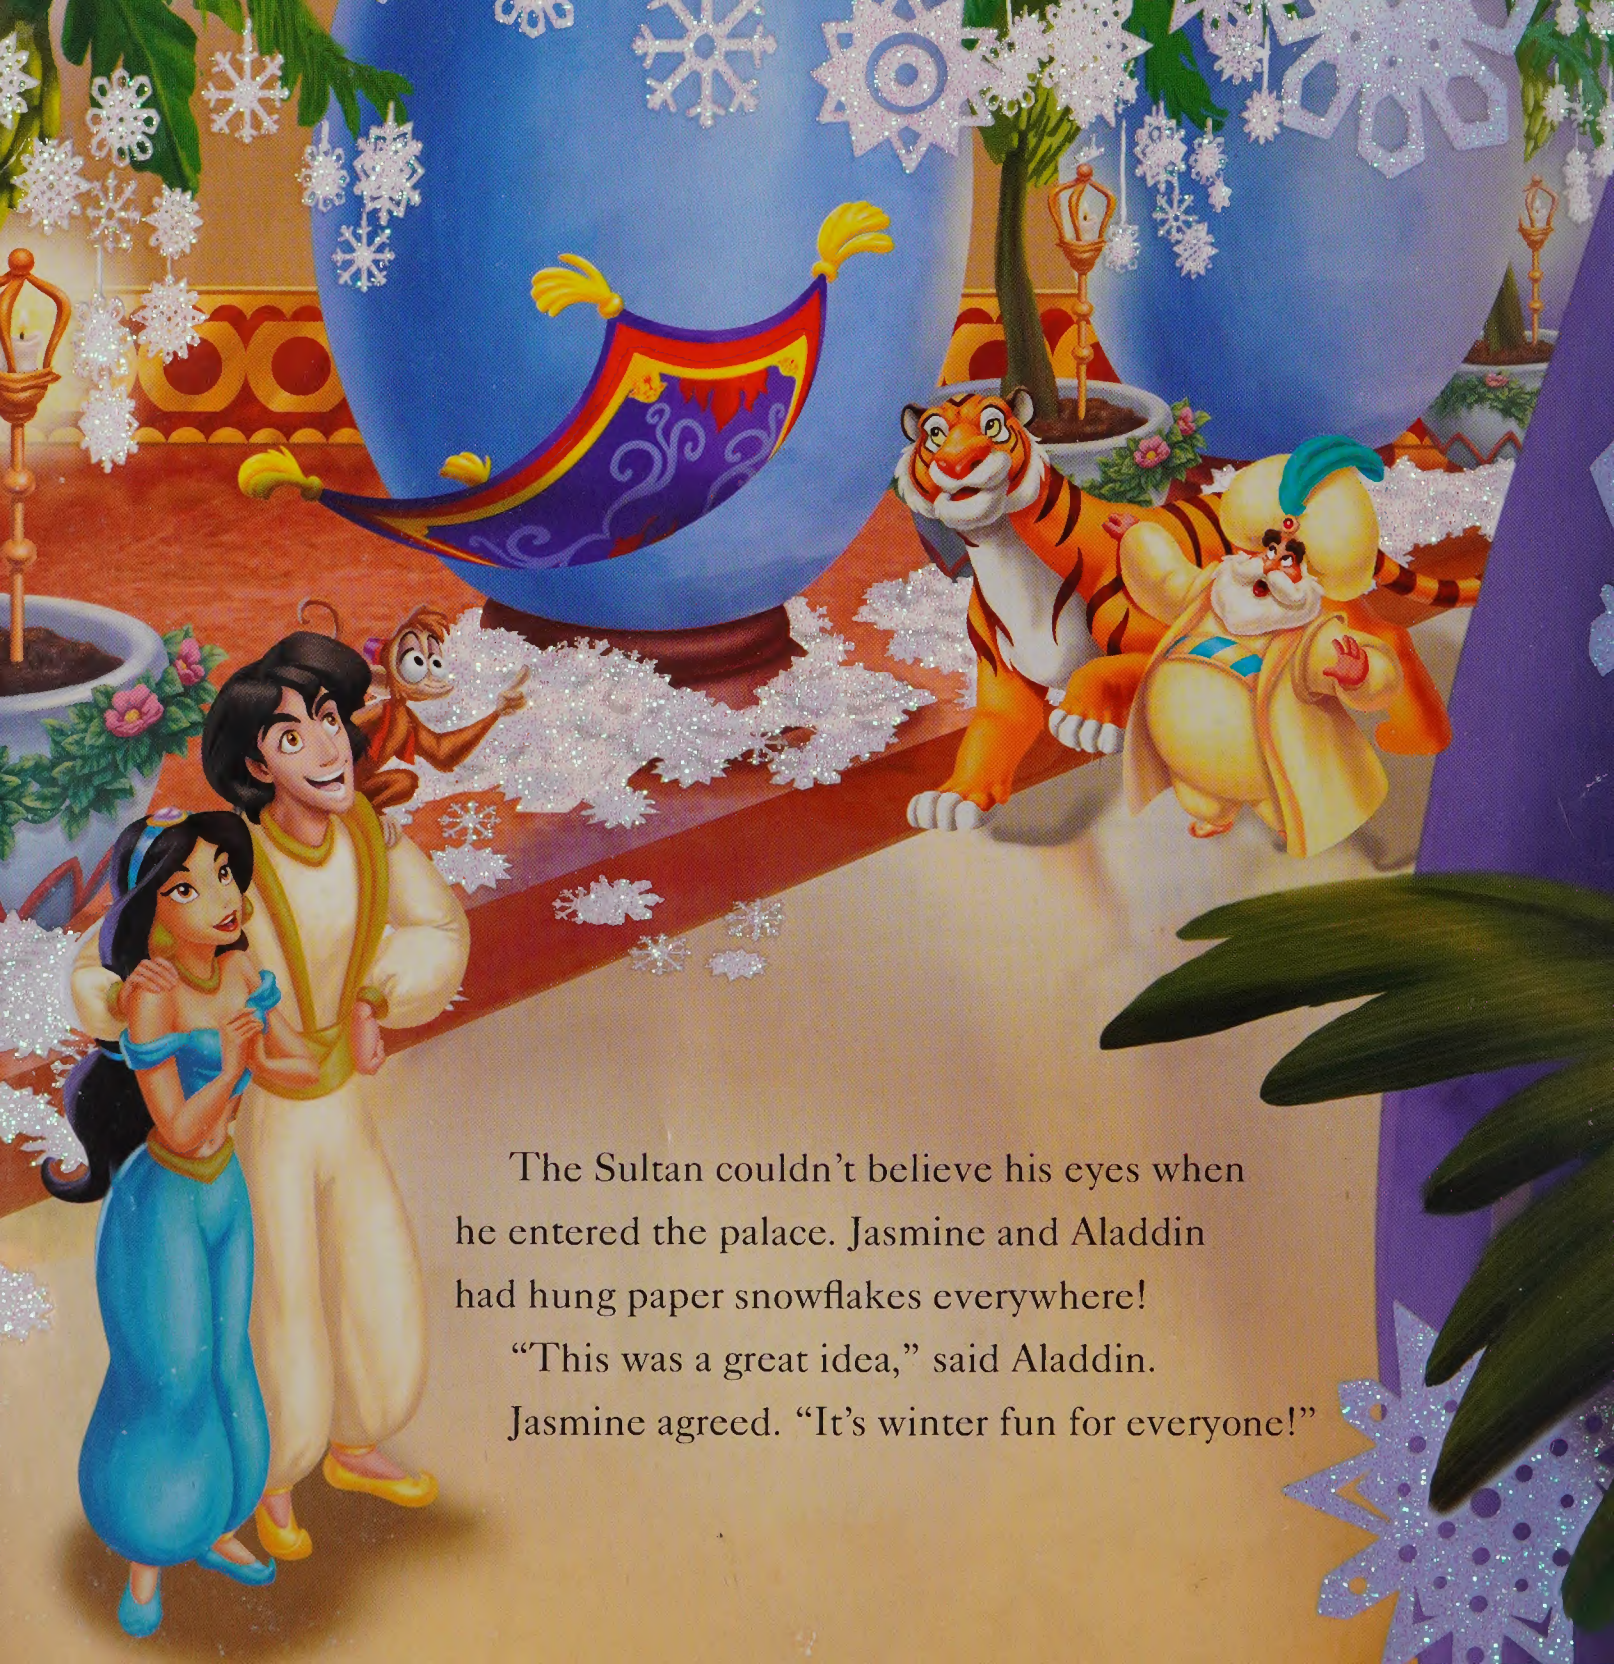
Jasmine and Aladdin laughed when Abu made a snowman that looked just like him. And everyone enjoyed the Magic Carpet's lovely snow angels. But nothing was more exciting than having a snowball fight!

"Heads up, Aladdin!" yelled Jasmine, throwing a snowball.

Back inside, the group warmed up by the fire. While Aladdin and Abu toasted some snacks, Jasmine got a wonderful idea.

"Let's give the palace a winter-themed makeover!" she suggested.

When they returned home to Agrabah, Jasmine and Aladdin got right to work. They found paper and scissors and used them to create some giant snowflakes. Even Abu and the Magic Carpet pitched in!



The Sultan couldn't believe his eyes when he entered the palace. Jasmine and Aladdin had hung paper snowflakes everywhere!

"This was a great idea," said Aladdin.

Jasmine agreed. "It's winter fun for everyone!"
